DANGER IN WIRELESS

French Scientists Believe Hertzian Waves Cause Explosions.

Paris. May 9.-The continuous emission of wireless waves throughout the world is believed by many French scientists to constitute a danger to humanity. Numerous recent explosions in France, the causes whereof have never been discovered, are now attributed to the action of Hertzian rays. Senator Cabart Danneville, member of the commission of inquiry into the cause of the terrible explosion several years ago on the French cruiser lena was one of the first men in France to advance the theory that Hertzian waves were possibly the cause of this and other similar disasters, notably the mysterious explosion at the arsenal of projectiles at Antsiveru, Madagascar. M. Cabart Danneville reports numerous Pt.cl'y curious phenomena noticed by himself in connection with wireless telegraphy. One of the most striking was aboard the French cruiser Condé, when, during the operation of the wireless, M. Cabart Danneville saw an aigrette of sparks issuing from the point of a torpedo suspended horizontally on deck. scientists state a belief that Hertzian waves are likely in the end to destroy many more lives than they will save.
